Land Expropriation:

Land expropriation in British Columbia is governed primarily by the provincial Expropriation Act , which allows authorized public bodies to take private property or property rights without the owner's consent for public use. Examples of authorized bodies includes Municipalities, regional districts, school boards, TransLink, and provincial ministries.

For more information:
https://www.bclaws.gov.bc.ca/civix/document/id/complete/statreg/96125_01