FAQ: Co-Applicant Approval Process

Question

What are the supported options for requesting approval from a co-applicant?

Answer

There are two supported options:

• Request via email: Use the email request option to send the co-applicant an approval request.
• Hand deliver the approval form: Provide the Co-Applicant Approval Form or Application Form so the co-applicant can review and sign outside the online email process.

Uploading a signed form or selecting the mail option are ways to submit a completed approval form after it has been signed. They are not separate methods for requesting approval.

Question

In the hand delivery or offline approval flow, does the co-applicant send the signed approval form back to the primary applicant?

Answer

Yes. The co-applicant signs the approval form and returns it to the primary applicant. The primary applicant is responsible for uploading or submitting the signed Co-Applicant Approval Form.

Question

What documents should the primary applicant provide to the co-applicant for offline approval?

Answer

Provide the Co-Applicant Approval Form, the Application Form, and any uploaded documents that describe the application so the co-applicant can review them before signing.

Question

Why are the Application Form, Co-Applicant Approval Form, and attached documents shown in the hand delivery section?

Answer

These documents identify what the primary applicant should provide to the co-applicant for review. If approval is requested by email, the same materials are made available through the email review process.

Question

If I choose Upload Signed Form or Mail Approval Form, do I need to submit all documents or only the signed Co-Applicant Approval Form?

Answer

Only upload or mail the signed Co-Applicant Approval Form. The Application Form and attached documents are provided for review and do not need to be submitted again.
