If your works affects other land:

If your application for a licence is granted you are strongly encouraged to obtain access to the land in question by negotiating with the affected landowner to obtain an easement. As an interim measure prior to obtaining the easement you may also complete a written agreement with the affected landowner. If you have already negotiated an easement, or have a written agreement, you can upload a copy of the agreement in the 'Document Upload' section of the application.

If you are unable to negotiate an easement agreement you may also investigate expropriation of the land. As a water licence holder, you have the right to expropriate any privately owned land, beyond the boundaries of your own land, that is reasonably required to access your water right and to protect your water source from pollution. Visit for more information:

http://www2.gov.bc.ca/gov/content/environment/air-land-water/water/water-licensing-rights/water-licences-approvals/expropriation